

The Australian Human Rights Centre (AHRCentre) is delighted to invite you to an evening with

Albie Sachs in conversation with Bob Debus

After returning to South Africa from a period of exile, during which he survived an assassination attempt, human rights lawyer, Albie Sachs played a significant role in drafting South Africa's post-apartheid Constitution and was appointed by Nelson Mandela to the country's first Constitutional Court which interprets South Africa's Bill of Rights.

Bob Debus was appointed Minister for Home Affairs under the Rudd Labor Government in 2007. Prior to his Federal appointment, he was NSW Attorney General, Environment Minister and Minister for the Arts.
